You're an original. As an individual, you have your own strengths, talents, interests and viewpoints.

We love that. And so do our schools.

While DSBN high schools are places you can go to be yourself, they're also places that you can go to find yourself. Our schools will give you the time and support to answer all the important questions that help to define you as a person. This knowledge will prepare you for success in high school and beyond.

WHO AM I?

Did you know that you have a particular learning style?

It's true, we all learn in different ways.

Understanding your particular learning style will assist you in finding the courses, pathways and experiences that match up with the way you learn best. This is something you'll learn as you work through your Individual Pathway Plan.

VISUAL LEARNERS:

You would rather see the information rather than listen to it. Flash cards, reading the text book and referring to charts and pictures all help you make sense of the material you're learning in class.

AUDITORY LEARNERS:

You're all ears. You learn best when you listen to lectures, participate in classroom discussions, or even by reading out loud to yourself.

TACTILE LEARNERS:

You prefer a hands-on approach that allows you to learn by doing. Things like re-writing your notes, making models and doing demonstrations all help you understand the material.

Pelham Cares to focus on long-term viability

Pelham Cares is starting 2014 with a focus on its long-term viability through the Home for Good capital fundraising campaign.

In November the non-profit organization announced the purchase of a building for its permanent home, after 30 years of looking for a suitable, affordable option.

The move into its new home on 191 Hwy. 20 East will take place April 1.

"We are confident this facility will enable us to better serve our clients, as well as making a sensible long-term investment," said Jane Gilmour, president of Pelham Cares Inc.

Securing new home allows focus on future

The campaign to raise funds for long-term viability has been in the works for several years, but the official Home for Good Campaign kicked into high gear Jan. 1 and will run until April 1. The goal has been set at $500,000.

"The amount was set at a level we felt would give us the ability to be sustainable in this new chapter of Pelham Cares' existence," said Gilmour, adding that even before the campaign gets into full swing, there is already more than $150,000 in the fund.

Funds have been raised since 2008, as a result of Project Pelham Cares, a committee formed to find a permanent home. While the work of that committee revealed potential sites, no suitable home was found, but the fundraising continued nonetheless.

Now, the Home for Good Campaign offers a one-time final push for the raising of funds to offset the mortgage costs significantly while having contingency funds for future necessities.

The campaign is being administered by Gilmour, several other Pelham Cares board members and community volunteers who have been working behind the scenes in preparation for this public fundraising phase of the project.

The committee is hosting one major event, the Gala for Good, March 1, and is encouraging community groups, churches and businesses to determine how best they can also contribute to the campaign. Contributions of any and all denominations are invited and encouraged; those that are $500 or more will receive special recognition. Several large donations will be announced shortly.

Details of contribution recognition, ways to donate and an ongoing listing of events will be maintained on the Home for Good Campaign page on the Pelham Cares website: pelhamcares.org/capitalcampaign.htm.

■ HEALTH CARE: Welland woman still hopes for response — three years later

The long, long wait for LHIN reports

MARLENE BERGMAN
QMI Agency Niagara

The agency that allocates billions of health-care dollars every year is not the only secretive one in the province. But there are other Local Health Integration Networks that are considerably more open and transparent than the LHIN that serves Hamilton, Niagara, Halimand and Brant. And that LHIN has been keeping secrets for a long time.

Health-care advocate Pat Schofield of Welland is now waiting six to 11 months to get access to a report presented at a February 2011 LHIN meeting. And Bill Doyle of Fort Erie regularly attends LHIN meetings without being able to fully understand what's going on due to a lack of information.

In November, QMI Agency Niagara asked LHIN chief executive officer Donna Cripps for access to the reports that make up the board's monthly meetings. QMI Agency Niagara is still waiting for an answer to that request.

Board chair Michael Shea — a Hamilton police superintendent — said he doesn't want the public to be able to read the reports until after the board has dealt with them. Currently, they are not made public until six weeks after they are discussed and approved.

Cripps recommended in December the public be given access the day before the meeting. But her recommendation was rejected by Shea and the LHIN's governance working group. Shea told The Standard he doesn't want to set a precedent in Ontario and first wants to know what other LHINs are doing.

But a report prepared for Shea and other members of the LHIN board of directors in December shows exactly what eight of the 13 other LHINs in the province are doing.

Four are completely open and transparent.

Three post the information immediately after the meeting — usually the next day.

Only one other LHIN is as open and secretive as the Hamilton Niagara Halimand Brant LHIN — North Simcoe Muskoka. Both wait at least a month before releasing the information to the public.

Schofield, who began paying attention to health-care issues in 2008 over concern

YOUR HEALTH-CARE DOLLARS AT WORK

The Hamilton Niagara Halimand Brant LHIN allocates $2.5 billion annually to 202 health service providers that deliver more than 230 different health programs and services to residents in Hamilton, Niagara, Halimand and Brant.

about decisions being made by the Niagara Health System, wrote Cripps in April 2011 asking for a February 2011 report entitled "Impact of Hospital Bed Closures on HNNHB LHIN's Acute Alternate Level of Care."

"I will review and get back to you," Cripps replied by e-mail.

A month later, Schofield asked.

This time, Cripps said the LHIN's governance working group "is working on a protocol to determine how best to share information with the public."

"The work of the governance working group is not yet complete," Cripps wrote in May 2011, "so I cannot share this document with you yet. However, I am anticipating this report will go to the board, probably in the summer. I will not lose your request and I will respond as soon as I have direction."

Schofield is still waiting. "As of January 2014, I have still not received that response," Schofield said.

She said the lack of transparency and the resulting inability to make sense of what is being discussed makes attending LHIN meetings "pretty much a waste of time."

One person who hasn't given up on LHIN meetings is retired teacher Bill Doyle.

He attends most LHIN meetings as a volunteer, scribbling copious notes and reporting back to the 3,000 members of the Niagara chapter of the Retired Teachers of Ontario. Doyle agrees the task is confusing and difficult, but he does it because health-care affects all of us.

"The agenda just gives you the topic" that is being discussed, he said after the meeting. "You need to read the LHIN documents as they are being discussed."

TRANSPARENCY REPORT CARD

According to a chart prepared for the local LHIN, here's what other LHINs across the province are doing:

Information made available five to seven days in advance

Central, South West, South East and Erie St. Clair

Information made available the day after a board meeting

Central East, Waterloo Wellington and Champlain

Information made available four weeks (or more) after a board meeting

Hamilton Niagara Halimand Brant and North Simcoe Muskoka

Doyle said he usually takes about eight pages of notes. After he writes his report, he waits for the LHIN to post its minutes — six weeks after the meeting — to see if his report is accurate.

Doyle would also welcome being able to see and read the LHIN documents as they are being discussed.

"To me, that's what should be done," he said. "Then we would know what they are talking about."

There are LHINs in Ontario that have managed to make their information public. The honour for most accessible LHIN goes to Erie St. Clair, which not only posts its agenda and supporting documents in advance of the meeting, it also holds an open mission for anyone wishing to speak to the board. It also webcasts live coverage of its meetings.

"We believe we are a public entity working for the citizens of our area," said Dr. Michael Hoare, the former acting chair of the Erie St. Clair board, and current vice-chair. "In order to have credible local input, we very much endeavour to have community engagement."

"We believe in making everything clear to the people, because we are working for them," Hoare said.

"We believe there is no reason for any secrecy. If we are working on behalf of the people, why would we keep that information from the public?"

■ COLUMN: Batty talks 2014

Building up and winding down in 2014

BRIAN BATTY

The year 2014 marks the end of the four year term of Niagara Regional Council with the election set for Oct. 27.

We will see the start of some large infrastructure projects this year including the replacement of the Burgoyne Bridge in St. Catharines and the construction of a sewage treatment plant in Niagara-on-the-Lake. Council will enter a reconstructed council chamber this spring which will comply with accessibility standards and provide improved electronic communication capabilities.

In Pelham, the final work on Regional Road 20 is planned with paving of the roadway from Pelham St. to Lookout St. with the addition of bike lanes to allow cyclists from developments in the west to connect with the Haist St. intersection. 2014 also sees the completion of the regional transit project and ballot referendum questions on the future of regional funding of transit and the governance question of the amalgamation of local municipalities into one Niagara.

At the beginning of June, Niagara will welcome more than 2,000 delegates from across Canada and around the world to the annual FCM conference (Federation of Canadian Municipalities). It has been the Council chamber's plan with paving of the roadway from Pelham St. to Lookout St. with the addition of bike lanes to allow cyclists from developments in the west to connect with the Haist St. intersection. 2014 also sees the completion of the regional transit project and ballot referendum questions on the future of regional funding of transit and the governance question of the amalgamation of local municipalities into one Niagara.

At the Niagara Peninsula Conservation Authority (NPCA), our five working group leaders (Governance & Accountability Working Group is chaired by me) for the Strategic Plan will meet later this week to finalize the Strategic Plan following a series of consultations and public meetings. It is hoped that the final draft will be approved by this spring and that the structural reorganization including a new senior management team will be in place by spring 2014. Also, we await the peer review report on the Welland River Floodplain Mapping. This report will help guide the final policy and procedure development for the Welland River Floodplain with considerable input required from local citizens as well as the Welland River Floodplain committee that has been established.

The Niagara Escarpment Commission is planning for a provincial review of the Niagara Escarpment Plan in 2015. In Niagara I am planning a workshop to highlight the nature of the NE boundaries and protected areas. Included will be up-to-date mapping which better defines the boundaries as well as consideration for inclusion of potential sensitive areas in the plan boundaries. Unlike the Greenbelt Plan which is characterized by straight line boundaries, The Niagara Escarpment Plan is irregular in its delineation. For example, I would have thought that all the Marlene Stewart Street Park would have been included in the mapping but recently discovered that only the northern boundary with the John Nerny trail system and the Lathrop Property is included. Expect articles and maps in future stories to help us understand and respect the boundaries of this unique biosphere in our community.

It is my hope to keep readers informed during 2014 of matters at the Region of Niagara as well as related Boards, Agencies and Commissions. By this spring I also hope to use social media to enhance this communication with the public.

Brian Batty is a Niagara Regional Councillor for the Town of Pelham, a member of the NPCA Board and a Commissioner of the Niagara Escarpment Commission.

Review designs for Downtown Fenwick revitalization

MAYOR DAVID AUGUSTYN

Just before the Christmas break, residents and business owners were invited to see the latest plans to revitalize Downtown Fenwick.

You will recall that while Council budgeted funds to revitalize Downtown Fenwick in 2013, staff ran into delays with design, with added work (properly called the storm sewer to Church Street) and with coordinating with the utility's schedules. Last September, because of these challenges, Council decided to postpone the revitalization until 2014.

Council made this decision after receiving a staff report outlining the project's complexities. In essence, to properly deal with the storm sewers and to then correctly join adjoining streets, construction crews will have to dig fairly deep. Second, the requirement to bury the hydro lines and other overhead utilities meant that the Town must work closely with Ontario Hydro; Hydro had said they could not undertake that work until 2014.

In early December, Council approved $4 million budget to reconstruct the roads, bury the hydro lines, and make the Downtown more pedestrian friendly.

The consulting engineers met with the public on Dec. 19 to review the nearly-final designs. While the town was well attended for the time of year (just before the holiday) I spoke to a few people that would have liked to attend the open house and review the plans.

Well, now the Town has posted the plans on our website at www.pelham.ca/current-construction-projects. What do you think about the streetscape elements? What are your thoughts about the proposed locations of the hydro transformer boxes? Do the road sections make sense? While there is still another, final stage of design work to be completed, now is the time to suggest any last improvements.

The tenders for the general contractor will go out in February; I hope that the first stages of construction can begin in March or April.

Council has dedicated staff to ensure a site negative impact on Downtown businesses and on traffic as possible. And, having learned from other major projects in recent years, Council is also looking for a clear process to keep businesses and the public informed about construction progress and a clearly defined person in charge to approach with any concerns.

We look forward to your feedback on the latest designs. With your help, the Town can ensure that the revitalization of Downtown Fenwick can be the best possible for now and for many years to come.

THE GREAT MOGAMBO

The Great Mogambo makes 2014 predictions

The Great Mogambo is back! And he's pumped about his 2014 predictions. "This could finally be the year I get one right," enthused Mogambo, "although I doubt it."

Without further ado, here are the Great One's forecasts for the coming year.

— Tired of the constant scrutiny and criticism, Rob Ford resigns as Toronto mayor in February and announces he's moving to Merriton where he'll run for city council on the promise of bringing an end to the gravy train.

— On the anniversary of the St. Catharines hospital opening in March, Niagara Health System officials honour the people who waited the longest for emergency department service during the first year. He receives a plaque that reads: "Next time, take an Aspirin."

— As expected, the Meridian Centre is being built as a long-time community favourite is booked to kick off the Niagara Wine Festival. Turns out, though, Mr. Grape can neither sing nor play the ukulele as promised.

— In January, India's most popular TV show, Diya Aur Baat Hum, announces it will have an episode where its main characters visit relatives in St. Catharines. To save costs, the show's producers shoot the exterior "St. Catharines" scenes in the Mumbai studio. "We understand the environment are very similar," explains a show spokesman.

— In February, the Ontario government officially plugs the plug on any further horse racing in Fort Erie. However, it does agree to give one-third funding for a replica of the Port Dalhousie Carousel on the old racetrack site. Bets on the carousel animals are limited to a nickel.

— By April, Merriton residents make it clear to council candidate Rob Ford they don't want the gravy train to end in their ward.

— It's announced in the summer that GO train service will come to St. Catharines by the end of the year. True, the transit agency is only sponsoring The Pen Centre's Polar Express Train in the Sears court, acknowledges St. Catharines Mayor Brian McMullan, "but it's a start."

— In February, several Niagara Region employees go to Court. Andy Petrovski's residence, get in his face and yell at him as he paints his living room. Petrovski files a complaint with the region's integrity commissioner.

— Local wineries rejoice in July when the province makes good on its promise to allow wine sales at farmers' markets. Their joy is short-lived, however, when they discover farmers are now allowed to set up stalls and sell rutabagas in Montebello Park during the Niagara Wine Festival.

— In June, the region's integrity commissioner rules against Court, Petrovski's complaint. The employees were justified in their actions, explains the commissioner, because Petrovski was sloppy in his painting and took excessively long coffee breaks.

— St. Catharines and General Motors hold a news conference in April to announce a major redevelopment for the auto giant's Ontario St. property. It will host ball hockey tournaments in the parking lot. When he's asked about future plans for the building, the GM Canada president simply chuckles.

— In May, Rob Ford returns to Toronto and says he's "very, very, very sorry" he ever left. The hasty decision to move to Merriton, he explains, was made in a drunken stupor.

— A Thorold woman accompanies her husband to his annual checkup in June. While the husband gets dressed, the family physician comes out and confides to the woman, "I don't like the way he looks."

"Neither do I," she says, "but he's handy around the house."

— A motion at Niagara regional council in September to designate St. Catharines as the unofficial capital of Niagara is defeated in a 24-7 vote. "If we had true representation by population on regional council," fumes Mayor McMullan, "we'd only have lost by a 24-10 vote."

— As community angst increases over the Meridian Centre blocking the view of the back of St. Paul's, the project architect tweaks the final design in an attempt to replicate the Salt City Look. Some of the arena's steel girders will be exposed and the exterior will feature metal cladding that is guaranteed to rust.

— New St. Catharines Mayor Jennie Stevens, who during her successful election campaign promised a grey train for every ward, announces during her inaugural speech in December that the long-vacant, old Merriton town hall will now serve as St. Catharines' city hall.

— Late in December, plans are unveiled to turn St. Catharines' old city hall building into a student residence.

— The Great Mogambo retires with an unblemished record.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SLIPPERY SIDEWALK IN PELHAM

While I am using equipment to clear sidewalks if it won't lead to the bare concrete or asphalt? Not clearing sidewalks properly will only create ice by pedestrian usage. Brittle brush sweepers propelled by town tractors are available that would clear the sidewalks bare. They resemble the brushes used by the sand sweepers in the spring. If you are going to do a job, do it right the first time to prevent lawsuits. Are you going to hire more staff to clean the sidewalks? Your works department runs on a bare minimum now. Hope there's no funeral the day it snows. It takes two men to prepare for a burial about three hours, barring no complications. You have to clean the snow in the cemetery, too. It's time this town stopped working with a dedicated skeleton crew for the work needed to do. These guys bend over backwards and receive no credit.

It's also coincidental that watermain breaks occur during the winter months when we are repaired by those snow-clearing personnel. Oh well, no shower or coffee this morning. It might be a good idea to have a contractor on standby to clear the sidewalks. They will be done the same day it snows.

NEW TREATIES NEEDED

I'm completely agree with Jim Bray's letter published recently. The treaties were signed more than 300 years ago, before this country became industrialized. It was easy then for the "white man" to offer so much to the natives, but times have changed. They didn't own the country, they just roamed it looking for food. Did the treaties offer to pay them, and their ancestors, rest for all eternity? The Canadian government gave them reservations to live on, plus monthly allowances. I know that people will not agree, but I think I have the right since my dad was a grandson of the chief of one of the tribes, but he never lived on a reservation, nor accepted any money from the government. It's time, indeed, to update the treaties.

REVENUE DISAGREEMENT

I found it interesting that the term "revenue stream" was used with regards to the proposed funding for the Toronto transit system by Mr. Epp. To me, that term speaks volumes. The first time I heard it was out of the mouth of Premier Wynne shortly after taking office. I kinda like the term "revenue reimbursement" but, hey, I guess that speaks volumes about me.

GOOD CARD AT HOTEL DIEU SHAVER

I have just completed the Parkinson's Rehabilitation Program offered at Hotel Dieu Shaver hospital.

I cannot say enough about the highly motivated and dedicated team of therapists, social worker, doctor, nurse and volunteers who teach us how to deal with daily living challenges. The program is two, three-hour sessions, twice a week for six weeks. Topics covered include exercises to improve mobility and balance, fine motor skills, instruction in speech and breathing improvement and a variety of Parkinson's-related subjects.

I encourage all those with Parkinson's to seek your doctor for a referral to this excellent program. A special thank you to the team and to former NHL player, Steve Ludzik, whose ongoing and tireless fundraising has made the cash needed for the hospital to make this offering.

■ DR. ROBIN WILLIAMS: Considered a leader in improved child, family health

Former top Niagara doctor named to Order of Canada

MARLENE BERGSMÄ
QMI Agency Niagara

Niagara's former chief medical officer of health is getting the country's highest award for community service.

Dr. Robin Williams, a former Niagara Falls pediatrician and Niagara Region's former top doc, was named a recipient of the Order of Canada by Gov. Gen. David Johnston "for her contributions as a public health leader promoting effective policies in early childhood development."

Williams said she is humbled but also delighted to be honoured for her work for a cause about which she is still passionate.

"It's always been my main interest, finding out what are the things that make kids and families happier and healthier — what will set them on a trajectory for health and well-being for the rest of their lives," said Williams.

Williams is currently serving as the Associate Chief Medical Officer of Health for Ontario.

In her role as medical officer of health for Niagara Region, Williams said she was pleased to be a part of the team that improved children's health and health care and instituted better supports for parents.

As a member of a provincial government panel in the 1990s, she helped bring about the creation of Early Years Centres across Ontario and improved benefits for longer parental leave for her parents.

"But there is still lots more to figure out and still lots more to be done," said Williams, a mother of three and grandmother of eight who still makes her home in Niagara.

Based on a recent Unicef report, Canadian children are "stuck in the middle" in a comparison to 29 industrialized countries for things such as education, housing, material well-being and health and safety, she said.

Of particular concern is Canada's ranking 24th out of 29 for children's own views of their life satisfaction, 27th for obesity and 21st for bullying, she said.

"This is an internationally respected measurement, and this is good enough?" she asked. "No, it is not. We are not making progress on some of the stuff we should be making progress on."

Williams said she will continue to use her role in the Canadian Pediatric Society to call attention to the struggles she sees young families facing.

She does not know how she came to be recommended for the award, and when she first received the phone call she thought it was in regard to someone else's nomination.

When she found out she was being named a recipient, "I was gobsmacked" she said.

"But public health is a team sport and everything I have done in my life is through solid teamwork. I am just a place holder. It's like that commercial — there are no unassisted goals, and this is a shared award. This is so not about me.

"I have been very fortunate, both with opportunities and with the people I have worked with who have shared my passion."

Williams will receive the award at an upcoming ceremony.

The Order of Canada is one of the country's highest civilian honours, established in 1967 to recognize outstanding achievement, dedication to the community and service to the nation.

Mixed results for Niagara kettle drives

DON FRASER
QMI Agency Niagara

ST. CATHARINES — Salvation Army in Niagara reports mixed results for this year's Christmas kettle campaign, which ended Dec. 24.

Pastor Tony Kennedy, of Salvation Army in St. Catharines, says the campaign raised about $230,000 of its $380,000 goal. That goal represents the money raised in the 2012 campaign.

"Even though we were short, the community was very supportive," Kennedy said of his campaign area, which includes Thorold, West

Niagara and Niagara-on-the-Lake.

"We need to make sure that message goes out there as well."

Greg Warkentin, Salvation Army executive director of an area that includes south Niagara, said campaigns there went reasonably well. "We came very close... we reached where we expected to reach, but could obviously aim higher," he said.

Fort Erie met its goal of $55,000, while Welland raised about $78,000 of a $80,000 objective. Port Colborne tallied about $30,000 of a $35,000 goal based on last year's final total.

"This isn't the only method we rely on for people to bring in donations," Warkentin adds. "We are working hard on other (fundraising) methods... we have to realize not everyone carries cash in their pockets for the kettle."

Pastor Jason Dockery, of the Salvation Army Niagara Orchard Community Church, said its campaign goal of $85,000 was reached, covering an area that includes Niagara Falls and Niagara-on-the-Lake. Its final tally was $85,252.

"We had a great response, especially in the last weekend before Christmas," Dockery said. "We ended up beating our goal, which was about $10,000 more than we raised last year."

The Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Campaign is an annual fundraising drive during the Christmas season.

Ketties are found in locations across Canada that include malls and stores.

Funds go to Salvation Army ministries supporting causes like food banks, food hampers, helping the homeless and other programs.

■ POLITICS: Burroughs wants council to refocus this year

Region must 'get back on track' in 2014

JEFF BOJCHOWSKI
Special to The Standard

Regional council must find its focus and get back to work after a tough 2013, said Niagara Regional Chair Gary Burroughs.

He acknowledged 2013 was a difficult year for the Region, between a wave of senior staff departures and a discipline controversy on council. For 2014, he said, council must "get back on track" and focus on the needs of Niagara residents.

"It's certainly, from the (councils) that I've been on, been a challenge. And that's why I'm talking about the refocusing," he said.

With a municipal election looming in October, Burroughs — who said last year he plans to run for chairman again — voiced hope councillors would campaign on their own time.

"My issue is, let's keep doing Regional business and try to keep the electioneering outside of Regional business time."

Ahead of the October vote, the Region faces a laundry list of big issues from starting work on a new Burgoyne Bridge — which the Region had to find another $25.5 million to budget toward — to building a new wastewater treatment plant in Niagara-on-the-Lake.

And the Region is pencilled in to host the Federation of Canadian Municipalities conference this year, too.

That comes after the Region saw the seeds of a culture shift planted when longtime chief administrative officer Mike Trojan retired in mid-2013. The Region was already without its corporate services commissioner and deputy treasurer.

Councillors began replenishing the roster by hiring Harry Schlange as CAO, Mo Lewis was brought in as interim finance chief, and the Region is seeking new permanent commissioners for finance and public works.

"It's certainly a culture change," Burroughs said.

"This is a change. We're still early. ... We'll have to identify exactly how the change is going to take place and where are the gaps."

Also difficult for the Region in 2013 was the issue of council discipline.

Councillors ultimately hired Robert Swaze as integrity commissioner. His impact was felt when he chastised St. Catharines councillor Andy Petrowski for two incidents involving regional staff, though Petrowski disputed the findings.

St. Catharines Mayor Brian McMullan

"It was again a challenge in 2013 just dealing with the issue," Burroughs said of the integrity talks. "I think we have dealt with the issue in the correct way."

At St. Catharines city hall, meanwhile, Mayor Brian McMullan pointed to evidence of progress around the city.

He said beyond the building of the downtown performing arts centre, Brock University arts school and Meridian Centre, the city saw its first private residential development downtown in 25 years. And councillors passed a new comprehensive zoning bylaw, slimming down 5,000 pages of regulations to approximately 160.

"Not only will it make it easier for residents, we've had just amazing feedback from the business community," he said.

He said the city is also juggling forward with a streamlined customer service desk. He figured that will roll out in April and consume a fair amount of time.

But, he added, many of the big files have been accounted for.

"We've accomplished a lot, but there's still more work to be done," he said.

■ CONDUCTED ENERGY WEAPONS: Stunning cost for something that will 'save lives'

Police want more Tasers; some question cost

BILL SAWCHUK
QMI Agency Niagara

Beyond dollars and cents, Tasers — or what police refer to as conducted energy weapons — are a matter of life and death, Niagara Police Chief Jeff McGuire says.

"In our opinion, it is really quite simple, a conducted energy weapon in the hands of a properly trained police officer, with proper steps of accountability in place and good supervision, is going to save lives," McGuire said.

"If hand-to-hand combat didn't work, and pepper spray didn't work, and you are fighting for your life, it gives the officer an opportunity to de-escalate a situation without having to elevate to the level of having to shoot someone."

After a bruising battle, Niagara Region council agreed to add $670,000 back into the police budget recently, the exact estimated cost to buy stun guns for all front-line NRP officers.

A final plan to buy stun guns will be presented in January to the police board, which can approve or reject it.

In Hamilton, the police service asked for $992,462 to equip all front-line officers with conducted energy weapons.

However, a report to the police services board recommended a plan to purchase fewer devices, which will be in a pool and signed out.

The report said this will help minimize costs and help ensure that as technology changes, the devices are more easily upgraded.

West Lincoln Mayor Doug Joyner said there are still questions that need to be answered in Niagara about the cost and the need for a Taser in the hand of every front-line NRP officer. The NRP deployed Tasers 19 times in 2012 and 27 times in 2011.

"In my mind, the chief needs to justify if every front-line officer needs one," Joyner said. "What they are saying is when they go out on a shift, they are going to grab their pepper spray, grab a flashlight. They are going to grab some handcuffs. They are going to grab a Taser. I don't know that it is necessary that each front-line officer have one. Certain people on that platoon have them and I think that's good enough."

The NRP has 60 conducted energy weapons for its specialized units and uniformed supervisors.

The Taser incapacitates a victim using an electric shock, which disrupts the brain's signals causing pain and muscle contractions. Most victims fall down, which is why officers use them in alternations.

Tasers have an "on-board" computer chip that records the date and time whenever the trigger is pulled. Some models record how long the trigger was depressed.

On Aug. 27, the province announced it would allow the use of Tasers by front-line officers. The province didn't, however, provide any funding.

McGuire said since provincial policy now allows police forces to deploy stun guns, he believes they should be purchased. The plan would be to equip 300 additional officers with the stun guns.

"The more coverage we have, the better," McGuire said. "If you look at the stats, there isn't a large number of uses. In a perfect world, we would have them at every call."

Because of the change in provincial policy, McGuire said there could be liability issues if an officer used a firearm when no Taser was available.

"I think it is reasonable to expect the board may be ... if a situation escalated to lethal force."

"Particularly in this jurisdiction, which is a large geographic area. Having a couple on the road, say for instance, up in 3 District (Welland), in my opinion, is not that reasonable. They can be miles and miles apart. These things happen very quickly. It might be different in some of the larger cities if you have people right around the corner quickly."

"None of our officers want to elevate to lethal force. They would very much like to have more steps before they get to that point. They don't want to go home at night having discharged their firearm thinking, 'I wish I had a CEW. I could have handled that differently.'"

Henry D'Angela, chair of the police services board, didn't return calls.

Regional Coun. Bruce Timms understands the chief's point of view.

"I think all of the officers need to be better trained on de-escalating circumstances, but, as the chief said, the presentation of a stun gun is often a significant deterrent. If they actually go that extra step and use it, it is a lot better than a bullet."

Timms said councilors want to know what putting $600,000 worth of the Tasers in the capital budget would do to property taxes if the money doesn't come from the NRP's operating budget.

"(The chief) is putting forward a good case to equip his people, but the board has to decide what we can afford," Timms said.

"It is a significant cost." Timms said the Taser deployment was one of the services threatened by an arbitrators decision to give the police a 3% raise in 2012.

"We need to demonstrate to the arbitrators that significant services are at risk because of these exorbitant labour awards."

McGuire said police could attempt to find the money within the NRP operating budget and perhaps not roll the weapons out to every officer at once, but stagger the deployment over a few years.

"But I think the potential liability of not using these weapons should be weighed against their expense," he said. "We are still working on our deployment model as to what's best for the people and what's best for the service. We will be reporting to the board at the January meeting."

■ EMPLOYMENT: Survey finds many people without pensions, savings

Facing a retirement crunch

DON FRASER
OM Agency Niagara

Doug Rapelle counts himself as one of the secure seniors.

Raising four children with his wife meant not being able to seriously save for retirement until he was in his 50s. But a decent pension from his job with Niagara Region meant his recent years have been comfortable.

"Having a livable income is so important in retirement, if you're going to enjoy it," said Rapelle, 80 — a Welland resident and retiree for 16 years.

"It's a major concern relating to quality of life when you get older."

Meridian Credit Union released a retirement study Monday that raises alarm bells about the long-term financial security of Ontario residents. It said 40% of Ontarians are putting off saving for retirement in order to pay down their debts, and 21% have not yet started saving for retirement.

About half said saving for retirement is not a priority right now.

The surprising numbers come as issues of retirement security are at the forefront. Some pension plans that once seemed secure are struggling, and governments are increasingly emphasizing personal responsibility for retirement savings.

Debate about increasing contributions to the federal Canada Pension Plan has also been rekindled.

With that in mind, Rapelle — former Niagara Region social services and senior citizens' services director — well knows saving or contributing to a retirement fund isn't easy for some.

"It's fine to say to people they must plan and save for retirement," said Rapelle, who is also with the Niagara Area Friendly Community Network. "But it's a big order when you have other responsibilities."

He points to another problem — many have also been employed in jobs without pension plan options, and that adds to concerns about financial security in retirement.

Some retired people with pensions that aren't indexed to cost of living are trying to live on the same amount of pension they started with decades ago.

One result of this is "a noticeable change in the number of older people working in fast-food outlets, big box stores, working as crossing guards, which is for many a necessity to make ends meet," he said.

Acting Meridian CEO Bill Maurin offers blunt advice about saving for a decent retirement.

"Time is your best friend here," he said. "I agree (debt repayment is critical, and something we all need to focus on.)"

Maurin said as in anything, a balanced approach is best. "People need to look at their assets and liabilities and manage both sides of that."

To that end, "take advantage of the savings and investment vehicles out there and ideally come up with a systematic plan."

"Just getting started is what really helps you," Maurin said. St. Catharines senior Kathleen Van Helvert only recently retired. Careful planning has also helped her financial situation.

"My husband (who died two years ago) always put in the maximum amount we were allowed, every year since RRSP's first started," said Van Helvert. "It always cuts down on your taxes."

"It's made me very independent now, in these years."

MERIDIAN RETIREMENT STUDY

■ 21% of respondents said they had yet to start saving for retirement.

■ 52% said they were focused on paying off debt.

■ 53% said they couldn't afford it.

■ 49% indicated saving for retirement is not a priority at the moment.

■ RRSPs (75%), pension plans from work (58%) and Tax Free Savings Accounts (50%) are the most popular retirement savings products held by Ontarians.

■ 18% say they expect some sort of inheritance to help with their retirement needs.

■ Ontarians plan to retire when they are 62, while current retirees on average retired at 59.

■ NATURE: Attraction closes for early spring cleaning

Metamorphosis at Butterfly Conservatory

ALISON LANGLEY
QMI Agency Niagara

A metamorphosis at the Butterfly Conservatory is underway.

The popular Niagara Parks attraction closed Monday to allow staff to prune, rearrange and reestablish the tropical environment.

"Over the next week we're ripping out the majority of the under storage of the conservatory plants," said curator Cheryl Tyndall.

The large trees and fast-climbing vines are being trimmed away from the massive netting that keeps the colourful winged inhabitants away from the misting and air-handling units.

The plants that are being removed — stachyarthra — are not only the main source of nectar for the butterflies but also a tasty treat for an insect called the leaf hopper.

"We don't use any pesticides at the conservatory and it's hard to control pests like the leaf hopper," Tyndall said.

"By removing the majority of those plants, hopefully, we'll be able to put a big dent in that population."

Replacement plants are being cultivated on site and will be planted in the coming days.

Also this week, crews will give the remaining lush tropical plants a good power wash and the large windows and netting will be cleaned.

Several air curtains are being installed near the entrances.

"When the butterflies come up to it, they can't pass because the current is too strong," Tyndall said.

"The butterflies are less likely to fly through and get outside."

Approximately 60% of the butterflies at the conservatory are imported from tropical regions of South America.

"And most South American countries really celebrate Christmas in a big way and they don't export during that time. We brought in a lot of butterflies before the Christmas break and we'll be receiving a new shipment this week so when we reopen we'll have 2,000 butterflies."

There will be more than 45 different species on display including the Blue Morpho, owl butterflies, long-winged butterflies and swallow tails.

Sprucing up the facility is a "very big and very messy" undertaking, Tyndall said. So it only made sense to close the doors in January.

"It's a really good time to do a shut down because a lot of people don't travel right after the Christmas break."

And once the conservatory reopens for business, Tyndall encourages local residents to visit the oasis in their own back yard.

"Actually, it's a perfect time to come to the conservatory," she said. "You'll really be able to enjoy it without a lot of people around."

The Butterfly Conservatory will reopen Jan. 13 which also gives staff time to prepare for the 20th annual Project Tree-Cycle where discarded Christmas trees collected by the region will be mulched on site.

The nutrient-rich mulch will be offered free of charge to the public on Jan. 18.

The public can scoop some free mulch and enjoy two-for-one admission to the conservatory on that day.

In February, the conservatory will introduce a "Swamp Creatures" exhibit that will feature animals of the world's wetlands.

The 11,000-square-foot facility is North America's largest glass-enclosed butterfly exhibit.

It attracts an average of 300,000 visitors per year.

■ CRIME

Pelham Target station hit by armed bandits

QMI Agency/Nagana

PELHAM — Two robbers who struck at a Pelham gas bar Saturday morning then torched their getaway vehicle before stealing another one are sought by authorities.

Nagana Regional Police said on Saturday at about 5:40 a.m. two disguised males entered the Target gas station at 151 Hwy. 20 W. One robber brandished a handgun while ordering the lone clerk to give him all of the store's cash. The clerk was then made to get on the ground as the two suspects stole a quantity of cigarettes.

Both males sped from the store in a green 2005 GMC Sierra pickup truck that had been stolen from a Hamilton address. The truck was discovered minutes later engulfed in flames in a nearby residential neighbourhood.

The suspects described as being in their 20s or 30s are believed to have fled in a second truck stolen from a nearby residential area. It is a grey 2001 Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck with Ontario licence plate 8180KH. There is a small rust spot on the rear cab and the windshield displays a Pelham firefighter sticker.

The first suspect is white, possibly native, 5-foot-6 to 5-foot-8 with a thin physical build.

The second suspect is 5-foot-8 to 5-foot-10 with a thin physical build and green eyes.

Police suspect the males reside in either the Hamilton or Haldimand area.

There were no injuries in this matter.

Unfortunately mixing alcohol with certain types of prescription medications can be dangerous. Alcohol can increase the risk of severe CNS depression when taken with opioids, benzodiazepines and barbiturates. Alcohol can also affect drug metabolism (breakdown to active components), or the absorption of some drugs. Chronic alcohol intake can also cause problems with certain medications because of the effect it has on the liver and specific drug metabolizing enzymes.

Chronic alcohol use increases acetaminophen (TYLENOL) metabolism increasing its conversion to metabolites toxic to the liver. It is always best not to exceed four grams of acetaminophen a day, especially if you are a heavy or binge drinker because of the damage it can do to your liver.

Chronic alcohol use along with NSAIDs (Ibuprofen) or aspirin can increase the risk of GI bleeds. However, an occasional drink with NSAID use is not likely an issue.

If you are a patient on warfarin alcohol can inhibit warfarin metabolism and increase your INR. If you change your usual alcohol intake you should have your INR checked.

Certain antibiotics, and in particular metronidazole, has the potential when mixed with alcohol to make people quite ill. When taken together a patient may experience low blood pressure, shortness of breath, facial flushing, and nausea.

Diabetic patients taking hypoglycemics such as GLYBURIDE or insulin are at risk of severe hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) when they drink alcohol. These patients should limit alcohol to an occasional single drink.

Any patient on medication for sleeping should be careful of alcohol consumption because of the additive effects of drowsiness and respiratory depression. Patients have been known to aspirate their own vomit and die from intoxication. This could be more likely to happen if a person mixes alcohol with their sleep medication.

This same problem could exist when patients mix alcohol and opiates.

It is always wise to consult your pharmacist or physician if you receive a new prescription and intend to have a few alcoholic beverages. Also please notify your physician or pharmacist if you are a chronic drinker. Even if you are not planning to drink while taking your prescription previous liver damage could affect how well you metabolize your medication. This could result in too high, or too low a dose for you.

STUDENT SNAPSHOT: JOSEPH

With a keen interest in sports, Joseph challenges himself by playing basketball, volleyball, soccer and track. Although he has a number of athletic pursuits, being in high school has also helped Joseph find some new interests.

Eventually, Joseph says he'd like to make some good money by playing professional sports. But failing that, he'd also be happy to get into engineering.

It's a good thing for Joseph that DSBN high schools offer everything from arts programs to science and technology, including 40 Specialist High Skills Majors in 13 different economic sectors. This way, no matter which interest Joseph decides to pursue, there will be courses and programs to match his needs.

GET IN THE GAME!

From aquatics to wrestling and everything in between, DSBN schools offer 24 types of different sports at both the recreational and competitive levels.

At the DSBN, your learning opportunities are almost limitless.

Our schools offer a wide variety of courses, programs, clubs, athletics and extra-curricular experiences to suit every student's particular interests.

WHAT ARE MY OPPORTUNITIES?

WANT HANDS-ON EXPERIENCE?

Specialist High Skills Majors (SHSM) are programs that help students put a laser-like focus on their learning. These programs allow students to concentrate their education in a specific economic sector and help prepare them for college, university, apprenticeship or the workplace. SHSMs allow students to gain unique insight into their chosen career path, as well as many industry specific qualifications and certifications.

Currently, the DSBN offers 40 Specialist High Skills Major programs in 13 different sectors:

Agriculture
Arts and Culture
Business
Construction
Energy
Environment
Health and Wellness
Hospitality and Tourism
Horticulture
ICT (Communications)

Manufacturing
Sports
Transportation

EARN COLLEGE CREDITS WHILE YOU'RE WORKING TOWARDS YOUR HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA!

In the Dual Credit Program, students participate in college courses and earn both a college credit and one high school elective credit which count towards both their high school diploma and their post-secondary diploma.

Working with Niagara College, the DSBN offers 4 dual credit programs: Hospitality and Tourism, Arts and Culture, Business, and Construction.

WE'RE PLUGGED IN!

At the DSBN, we know how important technology is to your life. Smart phones, tablets and many other devices help you to stay connected with friends and family, keep up with current events and so much more. The DSBN also believes that technology has an important role to play in helping you to become successful in school.

GO CLUBBING!

In 2013, there were more than 48 different kinds of clubs available for student membership at DSBN high schools.

CONNECTING TO SUCCESS

STUDENT SNAPSHOT: DUAN

"I really think it's important to have a well rounded experience in school," says Duan, whose high school experience has already led him to a job in his chosen career sector.

Now that he's in Grade 11 and taking more elective courses, Duan has the opportunity to pursue all of his other interests and explore new thoughts and ideas.

"There are so many different courses and clubs you can choose from, it's great. Plus, everyone I've met has been so supportive," said Duan.

STUDENT SNAPSHOT: JESSICA

Now in Grade 10, Jessica says the experiences she's had in high school have opened her eyes to a whole range of different career paths.

"Being focused on the arts, I thought I only had a couple options available to me. At first I figured I would pursue either acting or singing, but now I see all the possibilities that exist."

She added, "High school has been great for me. I'm getting the chance to experiment with so many new things and all my friends and teachers are so supportive, I couldn't imagine being anywhere else."

WHAT'S THE PLAN?

What you want to learn in school will be influenced by what you want to do afterward. You may have a specific career in mind, or you may have a general area of interest. Wherever you want to go, a good plan will form the foundation of your future success.

Of course, you won't be alone on this journey.

Our schools take great pride in supporting you and your family each step of the way. You'll be able to rely on your teachers and your school's guidance department as important resources. We'll be happy to work with you on creating an educational plan designed to meet your particular needs and help you achieve your future goals.
